Lunar White Clover

For past life work exploitation, forced labour.

White clover can be applied to a wide range of work related problems, stemming from past life of being forced, for whatever reason, to perform tasks at odds with the soul's growth.

White clover can be used by those souls who have been slaves in a past life, it is not specifically for the wounding of this type of abuse, yet can be used to heal the pain carried into the present incarnation as a result of being forced to work. For other souls economic necessity may well have forced them to perform unsavoury, dangerous or gruelling tasks in a previous life, the memory of which lingers, creating tensions in the present life. In a previous life some souls may well have been pressured or conditioned during their formative years to follow a particular career only to find it unsatisfying or even at odds with their beliefs or morals. An example of this would be the expectation to enter a family business when really a different career was wanted. White clover is the remedy that teases out these types of karmic knots.

For those souls requiring white clover there is often the feeling of being trapped in a particular job, unable to take the necessary steps to change. Another feeling is of having made the wrong choice in vocation but being in too deep to get out. There can also be confusion about which path to take. Use white clover if such emotions are repetitions of past life experiences.

There is a deep lesson being learnt by the souls who have karmic wounds to heal in this area: the refinement of their acts of service. Through forced or exploited labour these souls have experienced at first hand the worst side of work, their pain and suffering raising, refining and purifying the soul's desire to be of service in subsequent incarnations. White clover, through conscious recognition and release of past exploitation, helps the soul connect with its highest or most spiritualised potential to be of service.

White clover was used extensively on the continent of Lemuria. Its creation emerged out of our learning to conduct relationships on the physical plane of existence. It was used to bring awareness and respect to the boundaries of each individual -prior to Lemuria we conducted relationships purely in spirit where the boundaries are much less defined. Its present use emerged at a much later date on the continent of Atlantis when white clover drew close to the first souls to be exploited as slaves.
